Letters to the Young Gifted

What do gifted adults have to share with the rising gifted generation? If they could go back and do it all over again, what traits and paradigms would they wish they had? Explore the seven pillars that create or support healthy social, emotional and cognitive development in the gifted.

The Gifted Self: Developing Effective Self-concept in Gifted Students

Healthy, effective self-concept promotes achievement and life satisfaction. Telling kids they're smart and/or pretty is the entirely wrong way to go about creating this. This engaging workshop focuses on specific, research-proven tools that build self-confidence and self-concept in learners. RSVP Today! ppagsmail@gmail.com

When: Wednesday September 21, 6:30-7:30pm

Where: Cheyenne Mountain High School
NEW Auditorium, 1200 Cresta Rd, Colorado Springs, CO 80906

Developing effective Self-Concept in Gifted Students

parent event 6:30-7:30pm

Both presentations by Lisa Van Gemert

I'm Lisa Van Gemert, the Gifted Guru. I'm an educator by training, and I'm a Giftedland native – I was a gifted student, I've raised three gifted kids, and I've taught gifted students. The gifted trifecta! I've been a teacher, a school administrator, a homeschooling mom, a paralegal, an Army Intelligence Analyst (yep), and a cheerleader. Not in that order. Join me Sept 21 in Colorado Springs.
